MILITARY AND SECURITY DEVELOPMENTS INVOLVING THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA 2010 | ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS. Office of the Secretary of Defense, August 2010.

As President Obama has said, “[the U.S.-China] relationship has not been without disagreement and difficulty. But the notion that we must be adversaries is not pre-destined.” Sustained and reliable U.S.-China military-to-military relations support this goal by reducing mistrust, enhancing mutual understanding and broadening cooperation. China’s recurring decision to suspend military exchanges has impeded this effort. The Department of Defense will continue to use its interactions with China to encourage it to play a constructive role in addressing common security challenges in Asia and globally. At the same time, the Department of Defense has a special responsibility to monitor China’s military and to deter conflict. http://www.defense.gov/pubs/pdfs/2010_CMFR_Final.pdf

GENERAL CALLS LAYERS KEY TO MISSILE DEFENSE STRATEGY. By Elaine Wilson, American Forces Press Service. Washington, Aug. 17, 2010

The key to a successful missile defense strategy is layers, the director of the Missile Defense Agency said today. “Different missiles systems [are needed] so that if one fails or one can be tricked, you have a completely different missile system going after the second shot,” Army Lt. Gen. Patrick O’Reilly said. It’s “very challenging to get through two systems.” O’Reilly covered everything from U.S. missile defense priorities to cooperative efforts with Russia. <http://www.defense.gov/news/newsarticle.aspx?id=60475>

THE NATIONAL STRATEGY FOR TRUSTED IDENTITIES IN CYBERSPACE; CREATING OPTIONS FOR ENHANCED ONLINE SECURITY AND PRIVACY—DRAFT. U.S. Department of Homeland Security, June 25, 2010

This first draft of NSTIC was developed in collaboration with key government agencies, business leaders and privacy advocates. What has emerged is a blueprint to reduce cybersecurity vulnerabilities and improve online privacy protections through the use of trusted digital identities. http://www.dhs.gov/xlibrary/assets/ns_tic.pdf

COUNTRY REPORTS ON TERRORISM 2009. U.S. Department of State. August 5, 2010.

U.S. law requires the Secretary of State to provide Congress, by April 30 of each year, a full and complete report on terrorism with regard to those countries and groups meeting criteria set forth in the legislation. Beginning with the report for 2004, it replaced the previously published Patterns of Global Terrorism. <http://bit.ly/b2BwA0> [PDF format, 292 pages]; <http://bit.ly/cLvJi7> [HTML format with links].

INFORMATION SECURITY: GOVERNMENTWIDE GUIDANCE NEEDED TO ASSIST AGENCIES IN IMPLEMENTING CLOUD COMPUTING. U.S. Government Accountability Office. Gregory C. Wilshusen. July 1, 2010.

Cloud computing, an emerging form of computing where users have access to scalable, on-demand capabilities that are provided through Internet-based technologies, reportedly has the potential to provide information technology services more quickly and at a lower cost, but also to introduce information security risks. Accordingly, GAO looks at the benefits and risks of moving federal information technology into the cloud. <http://go.usa.gov/O2F> [PDF format, 12 pages].

NATIONAL SECURITY: KEY CHALLENGES AND SOLUTIONS TO STRENGTHEN INTERAGENCY COLLABORATION. U.S. Government Accountability Office. John H. Pendleton. June 9, 2010.

Recent terrorist events such as the attempted bomb attacks in New York's Times Square and aboard an airliner on Christmas Day 2009 are reminders that national security challenges have expanded beyond the traditional threats of the Cold War Era to include unconventional threats from non-state actors. Today's threats are diffuse and ambiguous, making it difficult--if not impossible--for any single federal agency to address them alone. Effective collaboration among multiple agencies and across federal, state, and local governments is critical. This testimony highlights opportunities to strengthen interagency collaboration. <http://go.usa.gov/3Ed> [PDF format, 26 pages].

NUCLEAR SAFETY: CONVENTION ON NUCLEAR SAFETY IS VIEWED BY MOST MEMBER COUNTRIES AS STRENGTHENING SAFETY WORLDWIDE. U.S. Government Accountability Office. Web posted June 1, 2010.

Currently, 437 civilian nuclear power reactors are operating in 29 countries, and 56 more are under construction. After the Chernobyl accident, representatives of over 50 nations, including the United States, participated in the development of the Convention on Nuclear Safety, a treaty that seeks to promote the safety of civilian nuclear power reactors. The Convention has been in force since 1996. GAO was asked to assess (1) parties' views on the benefits and limitations of the Convention, (2) efforts to improve implementation of the Convention, and (3) how International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) programs complement the Convention's safety goals. GAO surveyed the 64 parties to the Convention for which it was in force at the time of GAO's review and analyzed the responses of the 32 that completed it, analyzed relevant documents, and interviewed U.S. and foreign officials. <http://go.usa.gov/3k5> [PDF format, 51 pages].

ARMY HEALTH PROMOTION RISK REDUCTION SUICIDE PREVENTION. U.S. Army. July 28, 2010.

The report is the result of a focused 15-month effort to better understand the increasing rate of suicides in the force. The report is intended to inform and educate Army leaders on the importance of recognizing and reducing high risk behavior related to suicide and accidental death, and reducing the stigma associated with behavioral health and treatment. It represents the next phase in the Army's ongoing campaign to promote resiliency in a force that has been at war for nearly a decade. <http://bit.ly/9kypE7>

PROJECT BIOSHIELD: AUTHORITIES, APPROPRIATIONS, ACQUISITIONS, AND ISSUES FOR CONGRESS.

Congressional Research Service, Library of Congress. Frank Gottron. July 7, 2010.

Many potential chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear (CBRN) terrorism agents lack available medical countermeasures. In 2003, President Bush proposed Project BioShield to address this need. The Project BioShield Act became law in July 2004 (P.L. 108-276). The 111th Congress continues to address several Project BioShield-related policy issues. These include whether to continue diverting Project BioShield acquisition funding to other purposes; whether to change the countermeasure development and acquisition process; how to replace stockpiled countermeasures as they expire; and whether to alter federal efforts to encourage the development of broad-spectrum countermeasures. <http://bit.ly/bwHxr7>

NORTH KOREA: U.S. RELATIONS, NUCLEAR DIPLOMACY, AND INTERNAL SITUATION. Congressional Research Service, Library of Congress. Emma Chanlett-Avery and Mi Ae Taylor. May 26, 2010.

North Korea has been among the most vexing and persistent problems in U.S. foreign policy in the post-Cold War period. The U.S. has never had formal diplomatic relations with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (the official name for North Korea). Negotiations over North Korea's nuclear weapons program have consumed the past three U.S. administrations, even as some analysts anticipated a collapse of the isolated authoritarian regime. North Korea has been the recipient of billions of dollars of U.S. aid and the target of dozens of U.S. sanctions. The report provides background information on the nuclear negotiations over North Korea's nuclear weapons program that began in the early 1990s under the Clinton Administration. <http://go.usa.gov/3mT> [PDF format, 17 pages].

DETER PYONGYANG THROUGH BEIJING. By Michael Mazza. AEI. Published in The American, August 17, 2010

The Bush and Obama administrations' policy toward North Korea—avoid angering Beijing's leaders in hopes that they will voluntarily help in Pyongyang—has proven ineffective. It's time to coerce China. <http://www.american.com/archive/2010/august/deter-pyongyang-through-beijing>

WIKILEAKS MUST BE STOPPED. By Marc A. Thiessen, Visiting scholar at AEI, Published in the Washington Post, Tuesday, August 3, 2010

WikiLeaks is not a news organization; it is a criminal enterprise. Its reason for existence is to obtain classified national security information and disseminate it as widely as possible--including to the United States' enemies. These actions are likely a violation of the Espionage Act, and they arguably constitute material support for terrorism. The Web site must be shut down and prevented from releasing more documents--and its leadership brought to justice. WikiLeaks' founder, Julian Assange, proudly claims to have exposed more classified information than all the rest of the world press combined. He recently told the New Yorker he understands that innocent people may be hurt by his disclosures ("collateral damage" he called them) and that WikiLeaks might get "blood on our hands." <http://www.aei.org/article/102372>

IRANIAN INFLUENCE IN AFGHANISTAN. AEI Middle Eastern Outlook No. 4, July 2010.

This is the first in a series of Middle Eastern Outlooks documenting Iran's growing influence in Afghanistan.

As the United States targets the Taliban in Afghanistan, Iran is using soft-power tactics to combat U.S. influence and win over the minds of the people. This Outlook examines the activities of the Imam Khomeini Relief Committee, a charitable organization that aims to promote Iran's ideological and political goals in Afghanistan. Since the early 1990s, the Imam Khomeini Relief Committee's Afghanistan arm has been expanding its budget and reaching more and more Afghans, which poses a growing threat to U.S. interests. To succeed in Afghanistan, the United States must focus not only on the hard power of the military, but also on a comprehensive soft-power strategy. <http://www.aei.org/outlook/100976>

THE ATLANTIC COUNCIL OF THE UNITED STATES (ACUS)

CONFLICTING POLICY PRESUMPTIONS ABOUT CYBERSECURITY: CYBER-PROPHETS, -PRIESTS, -DETECTIVES, AND -DESIGNERS, AND STRATEGIES FOR A CYBERED WORLD. Atlantic Council. Chris Demchak. August 9, 2010.

The brief examines the strategic assumptions of cyberspace and the nature of the cyber threat. The author identifies a set of “cyber communities” and recommends a way ahead to reach consensus on organizing the U.S. government’s response to cyber challenges. The brief also addresses emerging issues in the cyber security and defense realm, including international cooperation and private-public partnerships. <http://bit.ly/9ao5ou>

IT’S TIME TO RATIFY THE DEFENSE TRADE COOPERATION TREATIES. Atlantic Council. Jonathan Ruemelin et al. July 20, 2010.

During David Cameron’s first visit to Washington as Britain’s Prime Minister, the issue brief calls for the White House and Senate to act to ratify the U.S.-UK and U.S.-Australia Defense Trade Cooperation Treaties. To affirm the U.S.-UK special relationship, and to advance timely military, economic and diplomatic interests, Cameron’s visit is the ideal occasion for Washington to move on a treaty signed more than three years ago. <http://bit.ly/aGty4l> [PDF format, 4 pages].

PAKISTAN IN THE DANGER ZONE: A TENUOUS U.S.-PAKISTAN RELATIONSHIP. Atlantic Council. Shuja Nawaz. June 28, 2010.

The Afghanistan war may be lost on the battlefields of Pakistan, where a vicious conflict is now being fought by Pakistan against a homegrown insurgency spawned by the war across its Western frontier. The author says that a year after the Atlantic Council raised a warning flag about the effects of failure in Afghanistan and the need to meet Pakistan’s urgent needs in its existential war against militancy and terrorism, the situation in Pakistan remains on edge. <http://bit.ly/9sCdXk> [PDF format, 28 pages].

BROOKINGS INSTITUTION

THE NEW START TREATY: WHY IT MATTERS: A Discussion Featuring Former National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft. An Arms Control Initiative Event. Brookings, July 23, 2010

On July 23, the Arms Control Initiative at Brookings and the Arms Control Association hosted former National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft for a discussion of the New START treaty, assessing how its ratification and implementation will serve the U.S. national interest. Brookings President Strobe Talbott provided an introduction, followed by remarks from General Scowcroft. Morton Halperin of the Open Society Institute, Angela Stent of Georgetown University and Brookings and Senior Fellow Steven Pifer, director of the Arms Control Initiative at Brookings, joined the discussion. Daryl Kimball of the Arms Control Association moderated. http://www.brookings.edu/events/2010/0723_start_scowcroft.aspx

POSTCARD FROM ISRAEL. Brookings Institution. Martin S. Indyk. July 12, 2010.

On a June 24-30, 2010 visit to Israel and Ramallah, during which he met with the top Israeli and Palestinian leadership, Martin Indyk sensed a shift in mood, which could well signal a growing ripeness for Israeli-Palestinian peacemaking. <http://bit.ly/9VOo4T>

UKRAINE – NOT YET LOST. Brookings Institution. Steven Pifer. June 30, 2010.

A recent visit to Ukraine yielded two narratives regarding developments under President Victor Yanukovich, now in his fourth month in power. The first narrative—seemingly the dominant one in the West—holds that Yanukovich is turning the country back to Russia's geopolitical orbit and restoring a more authoritarian political system. Perhaps; there are worrying signs. A second narrative, however, paints a more nuanced picture. Senior Ukrainian officials have said that, while Yanukovich attaches priority to repairing relations with Russia, Kyiv seeks a balance between Russia and the West. <http://bit.ly/dCnQ7k>

U.S. NUCLEAR AND EXTENDED DETERRENCE: CONSIDERATIONS AND CHALLENGES. Brookings Institution. Steven Pifer et al. Web posted June 7, 2010.

Nuclear deterrence has been a central element of American security policy since the Cold War began. The deterrence concept is straight-forward: persuade a potential adversary that the risks and costs of his proposed action far outweigh any gains that he might hope to achieve. To make deterrence credible, the U.S. built up powerful strategic, theater and tactical nuclear forces that could threaten any potential aggressor with the catastrophic risks and costs of a nuclear retaliatory strike against his homeland, say the authors.

CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

THE MODERNIZATION OF RUSSIA'S FOREIGN POLICY. Dmitri Trenin. Video Q&A, CEIP. August 02, 2010

Russia's foreign policy priorities increasingly reflect the government's drive to modernize its economy. In a video Q&A, Dmitri Trenin examines how the modernization agenda is guiding Russia's foreign policy with major powers including the United States, Europe, and China. Trenin also looks at Moscow's decision to support UN sanctions on Iran and U.S.–Russian cooperation on missile defense. While economic exchanges and cooperation on Iran point to positive trends in Russia's relationship with the West, Trenin says that collaboration on missile defense holds the key to transforming relations. Recent talks on missile defense are a positive step, but "it's very much an uphill battle and would require courageous leadership from both countries." <http://carnegieendowment.org/publications/index.cfm?fa=view&id=41322>

LEBANON'S MULTIPLE CRISES RISK ESCALATION. Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Paul Salem. July 12, 2010.

According to the brief, despite overall calm and a record tourist season this summer, Lebanon's political system has been struggling to manage a number of major issues. These include skirmishes with United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) in the south, escalating rhetoric with Israel over oil and gas exploration, the renewal of debate over Palestinian civil rights in Lebanon, and concern that the UN will soon issue its preliminary findings in the investigation into former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafic Hariri's assassination. <http://bit.ly/aNWwap> [HTML format, various paging].

COULD AL-QAEDA TURN AFRICAN IN THE SAHEL? Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Jean-Pierre Filiu. June 10, 2010.

Lightly patrolled borders, sparsely populated areas, and recent terrorist activity raise fears that the Sahel is a fertile ground for jihadist movements, notably al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM). Regional cooperation and discreet aid from the West are critical for countries to regain control of their territory and prevent al-Qaeda from gaining ground in Africa, asserts a paper by Jean-Pierre Filiu. <http://bit.ly/czwORK> [PDF format, 16 pages].

EXPLOITING GRIEVANCES: AL-QAEDA IN THE ARABIAN PENINSULA. Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Alistair Harris. Web posted June 8, 2010.

Al-Qaeda has successfully adapted its message in Yemen to exploit local grievances. Still, the violent jihad it advocates is not widely accepted by Yemenis at this point, and there is a small window of opportunity to take steps to undermine al-Qaeda's influence. An effective strategy to combat Al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP) must identify how the group's message resonates with Yemenis and develop ways for state institutions to address underlying complaints, contends the paper. <http://bit.ly/9jOSfl> [PDF format, 26 pages].

UNDERSTANDING THE 2010 NPT REVIEW. Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Deepti Choubey. June 3, 2010.

Last week marked the end of the month-long Non-Proliferation Treaty Review Conference. After intensive negotiations, the nearly 190 nations gathered in New York agreed to a final document and notably called for talks on eliminating nuclear weapons in the Middle East. The final document prevented comparisons to the last conference held in 2005 which was widely considered a failure, but there are still questions over how successful the conference actually was. Deepti Choubey explains that the conference achieved small but significant steps and should be considered a win for the United States. <http://bit.ly/drxwLP>

CATO

RETHINKING DARFUR. Cato Institute. Marc Gustafson. June 1, 2010.

The war in Darfur has been devastating to the people, and its aftermath has been a tragic story of suffering, displacement and sorrow. At the same time, the war has become one of the most misunderstood conflicts in recent history. Analysts and activists have oversimplified the causes of the war, slighting its historical and systemic causes. The briefing draws on historical analysis, explores mortality surveys, and dissects six years of American budgetary allocations in Sudan. <http://bit.ly/9Fgy4X>

CONTRACTING IN CONFLICTS: THE PATH TO REFORM. Richard Fontaine, John Nagl. Report. CNAS, 06/07/2010

In both Iraq and Afghanistan, there are currently more private contractors than U.S. troops on the ground. This report details the urgent need for comprehensive reform. The United States must embark on a path of ambitious reform that will require: new laws and regulations; an expansion of the government's contracting workforce; a coordination mechanism within the executive branch; greater scrutiny, more transparency and clearer standards for private contractors; a strategic view of the roles contractors play in American operations; and a change in culture within the government. <http://www.cnas.org/node/4560>

RESTRAINT: RECALIBRATING AMERICAN STRATEGY. Patrick Cronin. Report. CNAS, 06/06/2010

Faced with a shifting and complex global environment, America is likely to encounter heavier security burdens in the years ahead. These burdens, coupled with an ongoing financial crisis and runaway deficits, will force the United States to make tough choices about strategic priorities. Report author and CNAS Senior Advisor Patrick Cronin calls for a The United States must pursue a strategy characterized by, in a word, restraint, as the only viable means of sustaining U.S. power."

Cronin lays out recommendations for achieving a pragmatic combination of engagement and restraint. <http://www.cnas.org/node/4561>

RHETORIC AND REALITY: COUNTERING TERRORISM IN THE AGE OF OBAMA. Marc Lynch. Report. CNAS, 06/05/2010

President Barack Obama shifted away from the rhetorical framework of former President George W. Bush's "Global War on Terror" because he believed this would allow America to more effectively combat the challenge posed by violent extremists such as al-Qaeda. Despite this change in rhetoric, and dramatic changes from the early years after 9/11, the Obama administration's approach demonstrates striking continuity with the policies and philosophies adopted by the Bush administration in its final two years. This report examines the Administration's efforts to change America's rhetoric and adapt to new threats. <http://www.cnas.org/node/4545>

CRAFTING A NEW VISION: A NEW ERA OF U.S.-INDONESIA RELATIONS. Abraham Denmark, Christine Parthemore, Rizal Sukma. CNAS Date: 06/04/2010

In the 12 years since its transition to democracy, Indonesia has emerged not only as a powerful political and economic actor in Southeast Asia, but as an important player on the global stage. A new strategic partnership between the United States and the world's third largest democracy is essential to both nations. As the United States and Indonesia negotiate the bilateral Comprehensive Partnership Agreement, report author Abraham Denmark recommends strengthening economic and security cooperation between the two countries while helping Indonesia build capacity to contribute to regional and global challenges like climate change, economic integration and increased security cooperation. <http://www.cnas.org/node/4559>

SUSTAINING SECURITY: HOW NATURAL RESOURCES INFLUENCE NATIONAL SECURITY. Christine Parthemore, Will Rogers. CNAS, Date: 06/03/2010

In the 21st century, the security of nations will depend increasingly on the security of natural resources, or "natural security." Countries around the world rely on the availability of potable water, arable land, fish stocks, biodiversity, energy, minerals and other renewable and nonrenewable resources to meet the rising needs and expectations of a growing world population. Yet the availability of these resources is by no means assured. This report - authored by Christine Parthemore and Will Rogers - points to Afghanistan, Pakistan, Somalia, Mexico and Yemen as examples of how natural security challenges are directly linked to internal stability, regional dynamics and U.S. security and foreign policy interests. <http://www.cnas.org/node/4546>

SERVE THE NATION: U.S. SPECIAL OPERATIONS FORCES IN AN ERA OF PERSISTENT CONFLICT. Michele Malvesti. CNAS Report, Date: 06/02/2010

U.S. Special Operations Forces (SOF) are currently experiencing their most extensive use and greatest transformation. In playing direct and leading roles in Iraq and Afghanistan, as well as in the broader U.S. effort to defeat al Qaeda and violent extremism across the globe, these forces have become more operationally adept, endowed with more resources and organizational capacity. They are encountering greater demands for their leadership and expertise than ever before. Yet despite these developments, SOF are not optimized for success. This report examines three specific challenges facing U.S. Special Operations Forces today, and presents recommendations on how best to utilize this invaluable corps of elite soldiers. <http://www.cnas.org/node/4544>

IRAN, THE GULF, AND STRATEGIC COMPETITION: KEY SCENARIOS. By Anthony H. Cordesman, Vivek Kocharlakota and Adam Seitz. CSIS Report, Aug 13, 2010

Iranian Strategic Competition with the US: The Military Dimension
US competition with Iran has become the equivalent of a game of three-dimensional chess, in which other states are outside players that can constantly intervene, and one where each side can modify at least some of the rules with each move. It is a game that has been going on for some three decades. It is clearly unlikely to be ended by better dialog and mutual understanding, and that Iran's version of "democracy" is unlikely to change the way it is played in the foreseeable future. <http://csis.org/publication/iranian-strategic-competition>

RETHINKING EXTENDED DETERRENCE. Center for Strategic & International Studies. Seung Taek Kim. July 2, 2010.

The Republic of Korea (ROK) and the United States are allies that signed the Mutual Defense Treaty. The primary mission of the Mutual Defense Treaty is to prevent war and maintain peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula. The experience from the past sixty years shows that this security alliance has successfully served its purpose. For the U.S., it has effectively dissuaded and deterred North Korea from taking overt military actions on the Korean Peninsula by providing the ROK with "extended deterrence, including the nuclear umbrella" and displaying its overwhelming military force and political will to defend its ally from the North's aggression. The ROK, confident in U.S. extended deterrence and security commitment to its defense, has also been assured of its security and has believed that the deterrence would hold effective. Such belief has been affirmed as the relative peace and status quo on the Korean Peninsula has lasted over the past sixty years.

THE AFGHAN WAR: METRICS, NARRATIVES, AND WINNING THE WAR. Center for Strategic and International Studies. Anthony H. Cordesman. June 7, 2010.

The US and its allies have made major progress in developing an effective campaign plan, and in providing the resources needed to win the war, since changes in strategy and leadership took place in mid-2009. The reality is, however, that much still needs to be done, according to the author. The so-called surge in troops and civilians is only now beginning to be fully in place and many of the key steps necessary to fully implement the new strategy are not yet defined – much less in place. <http://bit.ly/c97F83> [pdf, 52 pages].

CENTURY FOUNDATION (TCF)

NEGOTIATING WITH THE TALIBAN: ISSUES AND PROSPECTS. Antonio Giustozzi, The Century Foundation, 6/21/2010

The resilience of the Taliban insurgency in Afghanistan over the past half-dozen years has dispelled illusions of a military “victory” excluding them, and an end to the thirty years’ war in Afghanistan seems certain to involve their reintegration in some form into Afghan politics. In considering possible negotiations with the Taliban, one particular concern is how united, or disunited, the Taliban really are: Is the control exercised by the leadership of the Taliban sufficiently strong to deliver on any negotiated settlement? Or is the control weak enough to allow for easily co-opting or buying off individual commanders, avoiding the pursuit of a settlement with the political leadership? This report by Antonio Giustozzi, written as part of The Century Foundation Project on Afghanistan in Its Regional and Multilateral Dimensions, lays out how the Taliban are structured and organized, with an eye to assessing the impact of their organization and modus operandi on their willingness to negotiate and honor a political settlement. <http://www.tcf.org/publications/internationalaffairs/Giustozzi.pdf>

TERRORISM HAVENS: SOMALIA. Council on Foreign Relations. June 2010.

According to the brief, Somalia is a chaotic, poor, battle-weary Muslim country with no central government and a long, unguarded coastline. Its porous borders mean that individuals can enter without visas, and once inside the country, enjoy an almost complete lack of law enforcement. Somalia has long served as a passageway from Africa to the Middle East based on its coastal location on the Horn of Africa, just a boat ride away from Yemen. MARITIME SECURITY IN THE MEDITERRANEAN: EUROPEAN AND TRANSATLANTIC APPROACHES. Basil Germond, Eric Grove. GMF, August 4, 2010

This paper discusses maritime security in the Mediterranean, beginning, as current dynamics mainly result from long-term historical developments, by examining the evolving security situation in the Mediterranean and the interplay of littoral and outside actors that culminated in U.S.-Soviet confrontation in the Cold War. The paper demonstrates how the end of the Cold War has increased the relative geostrategic importance of the Mediterranean, with new maritime security issues such as terrorism from the sea, drug trafficking, and illegal immigration becoming more important. This paper analyzes maritime security and naval cooperation in the Mediterranean in this current context, examining the relevance and capabilities of both NATO and the EU. It concludes by discussing, from both a European and a transatlantic perspective, the multi-directional and multi-dimensional challenges facing maritime security cooperation in the Mediterranean.

The debate on the course of Turkish foreign policy heated up again in the wake of the Gaza flotilla catastrophe and Turkey's no vote at the UN Security Council on sanctions against Iran. To argue as some do that Turkish foreign policy is guided solely by ideological considerations and by Islamic solidarity betrays a careless, ahistorical, and far too partisan a view of the current government's record.

HERITAGE FOUNDATION

COUNTERING TURKEY'S STRATEGIC DRIFT. The Heritage Foundation. Sally McNamara et al. July 26, 2010.

For decades, Turkey and the United States cooperated in the Mediterranean, the Persian Gulf, Central Asia, and even Korea. However, Turkish and U.S. interests in the Balkans, Central Asia, the Caucasus, the Middle East, and the Persian Gulf have recently diverged. On its current trajectory, Turkey's traditional strategic relationship with the West could devolve into a looser affiliation while Turkey enters into a closer alliance with Iran and other Middle Eastern powers hostile to U.S. leadership. The U.S., in concert with its European allies, needs to address the serious differences that are emerging, says the report. http://thf_media.s3.amazonaws.com/2010/pdf/bg2442.pdf

A WINNABLE WAR. Kimberly and Fredrick Kagan, Published in The Weekly Standard, June 26, 2010

Success in Afghanistan is possible. The policy that President Obama announced in December and firmly reiterated last week is sound. So is the strategy that General Stanley McChrystal devised last summer and has been implementing this year. There have been setbacks and disappointments during this campaign, and adjustments will likely be necessary. These are inescapable in war. Success is not by any means inevitable. Enemies adapt and spoilers spoil. But both panic and despair are premature. The coalition has made significant military progress against the Taliban, and will make more progress as the last surge forces arrive in August.

This report explores the major policy obstacles that stand in the way of the nuclear-armed states deciding to eliminate their weapons. It includes perspectives from thirteen countries: the current nine nuclear-weapon states, and four non-nuclear states (Germany, Japan, South Korea, and Iran). The report is a companion to Global Fissile Material Report 2009: A Path to Nuclear Disarmament, which used the lens of fissile materials policies to examine challenges to the achievement of a nuclear-weapon-free world. http://www.fissilematerials.org/ipfm/site_down/gfmr09cv.pdf

REFORMING THE INTER-AMERICAN DEFENSE BOARD. By John A. Cope. NDU, August 2010

Does the Inter-American Defense Board (IADB) have a future in an era of multidimensional security? Burdened by a mid-20th-century military structure and a tradition of U.S. leadership, lingering deep antimilitary discomfort within the Organization of American States (OAS), and severely shrinking financial and human resources, the Board, with its secretariat and 27-member council of delegates, has not been functionally useful to the OAS or its own membership and is ripe for disestablishment. To preserve this important multilateral channel for communication, military standard setting, confidence-building, and collaboration, the Board must become more productive on defense and security issues, less threatening to diplomats, and clearly responsive to OAS direction. <http://www.ndu.edu/press/inter-american-defense-board.html>

SOMALIA'S ENDLESS TRANSITION: Breaking the Deadlock. Andre Le Sage. NDU, June 2010

Somalia's Transitional Federal Government (TFG) was given a second lease on life in January 2009, after successful peace negotiations in Djibouti produced new TFG leadership and yielded substantial international backing. However, the TFG remains weak and has yet to develop new political alliances or military capabilities that provide traction against Islamist insurgent groups. <http://www.ndu.edu/press/lib/images/StrForum/SF257.pdf>

COCAINE AND INSTABILITY IN AFRICA: LESSONS FROM LATIN AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN. By Davin O'Regan. NDU, July 2010

Beginning in 2006, several West African countries seized extremely large volumes of cocaine—measured in the hundreds and thousands of kilograms—in single hauls. These seizures were often accidental, indicating that actual traffic was likely much higher. Cocaine departs Venezuela, Colombia, and elsewhere in South America in shipping containers, on yachts, and by small planes and jets. South American organized criminal and militant groups commonly deliver bulk shipments to West African traffickers in Ghana, Nigeria, Guinea, and Guinea Bissau, countries that the UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) frequently characterizes as the subregion's cocaine "hubs."

CIVIL-MILITARY RELATIONS IN CHINA: ASSESSING THE PLA'S ROLE IN ELITE POLITICS. Michael Kiselycznyk and Phillip C. Saunders. NDU Center for Strategic Research, Institute for National Strategic Studies, June 2010

This study reviews the last 20 years of academic literature on the role of the People's Liberation Army (PLA) in Chinese elite politics. It examines the PLA's willingness to support the continued rule of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) and to obey directives from top party leaders, the PLA's influence on the selection of China's top civilian leaders, and the PLA's ability to shape the domestic political environment.

ASSESSING CHINESE MILITARY TRANSPARENCY. Michael Kiselycznyk and Phillip C. Saunders. National Defense University Press. Institute for National Strategic Studies, June 2010

This paper presents a methodology for assessing military transparency that aims to confront the question of China's military transparency from a comparative perspective. Drawing upon research done by Korean defense expert Dr. Choi Kang as part of a Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia-Pacific working group, it focuses on defense white papers as a readily available and comparable source of official defense information. The paper develops an objective methodology for comparing the relative transparency of defense white papers by employing standardized definitions and a four-tiered set of criteria to evaluate transparency across 19 categories.

NUCLEAR POLITICS IN IRAN. Edited by Judith S. Yaphe. NDU Center for Strategic Research, Institute for National Strategic Studies, June 2010

This collection of analyses on the unintended consequences of Iran's nuclear policy for its domestic and international relations is the first in a series of papers that will examine the impact of critical issues and developments on key countries in the Greater Middle East and on U.S. security interests. Succeeding papers will identify similar emerging issues in Turkey, Iraq, Yemen, and the Persian Gulf region. For the most part, the papers will represent the independent research and opinions of academic scholars and regional experts prepared for and presented at the National Defense University. This inaugural paper focuses on the nuclearization of Iranian politics, society, and security. <http://www.ndu.edu/press/lib/images/strategicPerspectives/middle-east-perspectives.pdf>

PEW

CONCERN ABOUT EXTREMIST THREAT SLIPS IN PAKISTAN. Pew Research Center, Global Attitudes Project. July 29, 2010.

Pakistanis remain in a grim mood about the state of their country. Overwhelming majorities are dissatisfied with national conditions, unhappy with the nation's economy, and concerned about political corruption and crime. Only one-in-five express a positive view of President Asif Ali Zardari, down from 64% just two years ago. As Pakistani forces continue to battle extremist groups within the country, nearly all Pakistanis describe terrorism as a very big problem. However, they have grown markedly less concerned that extremists might take control of the country. <http://bit.ly/cnLK6X> [PDF format, 59 pages].

RAND

RESERVE COMPONENT UNIT STABILITY- EFFECTS ON DEPLOYABILITY AND TRAINING. Thomas F. Lippiatt, J. Michael Polich. RAND, August 2010

Personnel stability is highly valued by all military forces, particularly in combat units and other formations that deploy to a theater of operations. The U.S. Army in particular aims to maximize unit stability (that is, the degree to which a unit's membership remains constant over time). Yet, Reserve Component units typically experience a surge of personnel turbulence as they approach mobilization and deployment.

AFGHANISTAN'S LOCAL WAR: BUILDING LOCAL DEFENSE FORCES. RAND Corporation. Seth G. Jones, Arturo Monoz. July 26, 2010.

Security in Afghanistan has historically required a combination of top-down efforts from the central government and bottom-up efforts from local communities. Effectively leveraging local communities should significantly improve counterinsurgency prospects and can facilitate mobilization of the population against insurgents, according to the authors. The analysis documents lessons about the viability of establishing local security in Afghanistan and addresses concerns about the wisdom of such policies.

VICTORY HAS A THOUSAND FATHERS: SOURCES OF SUCCESS IN COUNTERINSURGENCY. RAND Corporation. Christopher Paul et al. July 19, 2010.

Relying on a collection of the 30 most recent resolved insurgencies, along with a bank of factors that helped or hindered the counterinsurgency (COIN) force in each case and in each phase of each case, several commonalities emerge. For instance, the data show that good COIN practices tend to "run in packs" and that the balance of selected good and bad practices perfectly predicts the outcome of a conflict. The importance of popular support is confirmed, but the ability to interdict tangible support (such as new personnel, materiel, and financing) is the single best predictor of COIN force success.

HIRED GUNS: VIEW ABOUT ARMED CONTRACTORS IN OPERATION IRAQI FREEDOM. RAND Corporation. Sarah K. Cotton et al. June 16, 2010.

The use of armed private security contractors (PSCs) in the Iraq war has been unprecedented. Not only government agencies but also journalists, reconstruction contractors, and nongovernmental organizations frequently view them as a logical choice to fill their security needs, yet there have been a number of reports of PSCs committing serious, and sometimes fatal, abuses of power in Iraq. The study uses a systematic, empirically based survey of opinions of U.S. military and State Department personnel on the ground in Iraq to shed light on the situation. <http://bit.ly/cr7lyv> [PDF format, 143 pages].

DEVELOPING AN ARMY STRATEGY FOR BUILDING PARTNER CAPACITY FOR STABILITY OPERATIONS. Jefferson P. Marquis et al. RAND, June 2010

The U.S. government is facing the dual challenge of building its own interagency capacity for conducting stability operations while simultaneously building partner capacity (BPC) for stability operations. The purpose of this study is to assist the U.S. Army, the Department of Defense, and other U.S. government agencies in developing an integrated BPC for stability operations strategy.

SMALL ARMS SURVEY 2010: GANGS, GROUPS, AND GUNS. Small Arms Survey, June 2010

The Small Arms Survey 2010 reviews a range of issues related to gangs and armed groups, focusing on their use of violence, as well as emerging efforts to prevent and curb the damage they inflict on society. The volume includes studies of prison gangs, girls in gangs, and pro-government groups; it also features case studies from Ecuador and Southern Sudan. Rounding out the book is original research on the global ammunition trade and on options for controlling illicit firearm transfers by air.

WMD, DRUGS, AND CRIMINAL GANGS IN CENTRAL AMERICA: LEVERAGING NONPROLIFERATION ASSISTANCE TO ADDRESS SECURITY/DEVELOPMENT NEEDS WITH UNSCR 1540. Brian Finlay. Stanley Foundation. Conference Report, July 2010

Few regions of the world better illustrate the intimate nexus between human development and security than does Central America, a recent Stanley Foundation project report concludes. The report, informed largely by a regional workshop in Panama City earlier this year, analyzes a region of inherent economic and social promise that has long been frustrated by countless security challenges related to small arms, drugs, and criminal gangs. <http://www.stanleyfdn.org/resources.cfm?id=430>

REVIEW AND VITALIZATION OF PEACEBUILDING. Stanley Foundation. Conference Report, June 2010

In an increasingly interdependent world, strategic international coordination has proven a largely elusive ideal. The United Nations Peacebuilding Commission (PBC) was explicitly designed to confront this challenge and tailored to meet the demands of post-conflict complexity by providing an integrated and coherent approach to post-conflict peacebuilding and reconciliation. Five years after creation of the PBC, many of the issues it faces highlight the challenges it is likely to confront in the long term, making this an ideal time to take stock of PBC experience and consider ways to maximize its potential. On May 21–23, 2010, the Stanley Foundation convened a conference that examined key issues for the review process. Many inspired consensus, while others raised questions in need of further exploration. <http://www.stanleyfdn.org/publications/report/RVPBrpt610.pdf>

U.S. MILITARY FORCES AND POLICE ASSISTANCE IN STABILITY OPERATIONS: THE LEAST-WORST OPTION TO FILL THE U.S. CAPACITY GAP. Colonel (Ret.) Dennis E Keller. PKSOI Papers. SSI, August 24, 2010

Stability operations in Iraq and Afghanistan continue to be challenged by the lack of effective local police forces to secure the civilian population from insurgent infiltration and criminal violence. Given U.S. government legal and organizational shortfalls to train and advise foreign police forces, coupled with an operational environment characterized by local police corruption and abusiveness, this monograph proposes a way ahead for effective community based policing despite these adverse circumstances. <http://www.strategicstudiesinstitute.army.mil/pubs/display.cfm?pubID=1013>

CHINESE ENERGY SECURITY: THE MYTH OF THE PLAN'S FRONTLINE STATUS. Dr. Ryan Clarke. SSI Letort Papers, August 17, 2010

As the Chinese economy continues to expand at impressive rates, energy security strategies have assumed center stage in Beijing. Given that China relies heavily on energy imports, many are predicting the emergence of a blue water navy that seeks to engage in global power projection and secure China's energy supply. These assessments are incorrect. <http://www.strategicstudiesinstitute.army.mil/pubs/display.cfm?pubID=1012>

DEFENSE ENERGY RESILIENCE: LESSONS FROM ECOLOGY. Dr. Scott Thomas, Mr. David Kerner. SSI Letort Papers, August 13, 2010

National Security relies heavily on the ready availability of energy resources in the types, quantities, and locations the military demands. While U.S. energy needs are currently met, the shrinking gap between global supply and demand draws the world closer to a tipping point at which human behavior is less predictable, competition overwhelms social and geopolitical normalizing forces, and conflict becomes more likely and more pronounced. Given concerns about future resource availability, DoD would be well served by devising and implementing a sustainable, resilient energy strategy that addresses current projections and adapts to evolving conditions. <http://www.strategicstudiesinstitute.army.mil/pubs/display.cfm?pubID=1011>

ORGANIZING TO COMPETE IN THE POLITICAL TERRAIN. Dr. Nadia Schadlow. SSI, August 2010

In this analysis, the author identifies some of the continuing obstacles to achieving civil-military integration in war. She argues that there are continuing disagreements about who should lead the shaping of the political landscape in war, and that while doctrine has advanced in this area, good doctrine does not guarantee the effective execution of governance-related tasks. Sound operational approaches are required as well. <http://www.strategicstudiesinstitute.army.mil/pubs/display.cfm?PubID=1007>

On November 26, 2008, the Project on National Security Reform submitted its 2-year study of the national security system, "Forging a New Shield," to the President, President-elect, and Congress. The work of the Vision Working Group led to the formulation of the following recommendation: The country must establish a mechanism to infuse greater foresight into the Executive Branch, and in particular the national security system. This proposed mechanism, named the Center for Strategic Analysis and Assessment, would exist and operate within the Executive Office of the President. This volume details the proposed architecture and operation of the Center. <http://www.strategicstudiesinstitute.army.mil/pubs/display.cfm?pubID=1002>

THE PLA AT HOME AND ABROAD: ASSESSING THE OPERATIONAL CAPABILITIES OF CHINA'S MILITARY. Edited by Mr. Roy Kamphausen, Dr. David Lai, Dr. Andrew Scobell. SSI, July 06, 2010

In 2009, the People's Republic of China, the People's Liberation Army (PLA) Navy, and the PLA Air Force celebrated their 60th anniversaries. Behind China's economic development, the PLA parades, and the spectacular celebration fireworks, the world clearly saw an ambitious China edging its way to the center stage of international economic, political, and military affairs. However, a few other major events in the last 2 years came just in time to remind the Chinese leaders, and the world as well, that China still faced a challenging future. <http://www.strategicstudiesinstitute.army.mil/pubs/display.cfm?pubID=995>

ENDGAME FOR THE WEST IN AFGHANISTAN? EXPLAINING THE DECLINE IN SUPPORT FOR THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN IN THE UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN, CANADA, AUSTRALIA, FRANCE AND GERMANY. Strategic Studies Institute. Charles A. Miller. June 2010.

Domestic public opinion is frequently and correctly described as a crucial battlefield in the war in Afghanistan. Commentary by media and political figures currently notes not only the falling support for the war in the U.S. but also in many of its key allies in Europe and elsewhere, making it all the more difficult for the Obama administration to secure the help it believes it needs to bring the war to a successful conclusion. The study is an examination of the determinants of domestic support for and opposition to the war in Afghanistan in the United States and in five of its key allies, the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Canada, and Australia. <http://go.usa.gov/Orl> [PDF format, 174 pages].

THE QDR IN PERSPECTIVE: MEETING AMERICA'S NATIONAL SECURITY NEEDS IN THE 21ST CENTURY. CORRECTED ADVANCE Copy of the Final Report of the Quadrennial Defense Review Independent Panel. Stephen J. Hadley, Co-Chairman William J. Perry, Co-Chairman et al. USIP, July 29, 2010.

The Report first conducts a brief survey of foreign policy, with special emphasis on the missions that America's military has been called on to perform since the fall of the Berlin Wall. In the next two chapters, it turns to the capabilities which the government must develop and sustain in order to protect those enduring interests. In the third chapter, it also reviews the military's personnel policies; the fifth chapter deals with the QDR process itself. <http://www.usip.org/files/qdr/qdrreport.pdf>

THE ECONOMY OF BURMA/MYANMAR ON THE EVE OF THE 2010 ELECTIONS. U.S. Institute of Peace. Lex Rieffel. July 8, 2010.

The government of Burma is undergoing a critical transition: Before the end of 2010, the military regime that has ruled the country since a palace coup in 1998 will hold an election based on a constitution drafted in a nondemocratic process and approved by a referendum in 2008. The referendum fell far short of global standards of credibility and the election is likely to yield a government that neither the antimilitary movement nor the international community views as legitimate. However, the constitution and election also may offer opportunities for further international involvement that began in the wake of Cyclone Nargis in 2008. <http://bit.ly/cnd1X2> In Burmese [PDF format, 28 pages].

THE WASHINGTON INSTITUTE FOR NEAR-EAST POLICY

REFORMING THE ROGUE: LESSONS FROM THE U.S.-LIBYA RAPPROCHEMENT. Dana Moss. Policy Focus #105. The Washington Institute for Near-East Policy, August 2010

In August 2009, Scottish authorities released Abdel Basset al-Megrahi -- the Libyan terrorist responsible for the deaths of 270 passengers in the 1988 Pan Am Flight 103 bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland. Libya's acceptance of responsibility for the Lockerbie bombing and agreement to pay compensation to the families of victims had been key requirements of the 2003 resumption of U.S.-Libya relations in the wake of that country's dramatic, voluntary surrender of its weapons of mass destruction (WMD). Although Libya moved quickly to dismantle its nuclear weapons program, leader Muammar Qadhafi has yet to dispose of the country's chemical weapons cache, and he later retracted the initial acceptance of responsibility for the Lockerbie bombing -- instead providing al-Megrahi with a hero's welcome home last August. (...) today's Libya may serve to demonstrate the problems America will face as it pursues diplomatic engagement with rogue regimes. <http://www.washingtoninstitute.org/templateC04.php?CID=330>

FIGHTING THE IDEOLOGICAL BATTLE: THE MISSING LINK IN U.S. STRATEGY TO COUNTER VIOLENT EXTREMISM. J. Scott Carpenter, Matthew Levitt, Steven Simon, and Juan Zarate. The Washington Institute for Near-East Policy, July 2010

As nonaffiliate terrorist actors begin to take center stage and al-Qaeda's core strength diminishes, it has become clear that America is at war with a larger enemy: the extremist ideology that fuels and supports Islamist violence. Unfortunately, the United States is not well equipped to fight on this ideological battleground, and U.S. efforts to confront the ideology worldwide have not kept pace with more successful military targeting of high-level al-Qaeda leaders. To successfully defeat Islamist terrorism at its most fundamental source, this new Washington Institute Strategic Report argues that, rather than avoid any mention of the religious motivation behind the terrorism of al-Qaeda and other like-minded organizations, the Obama administration should sharpen the distinction between the religion of Islam and the political ideology of radical Islamism. <http://www.washingtoninstitute.org/templateC04.php?CID=332>

ACTIONS, NOT JUST ATTITUDES: A NEW PARADIGM FOR U.S.-ARAB RELATIONS. David Pollock with Cole Bunzel and Curtis Cannon. The Washington Institute for Near-East Policy, June 2010

The latest Pew poll on Middle Eastern political behavior illustrates the media's post-9/11 tendency to report on America's standing on the Arab street -- without analyzing whether attitudes toward the U.S. have any significant effect on actual Arab behavior. To remedy this striking diagnostic gap, The Washington Institute presents a new study that utilizes hard statistics, unprecedented in scope and depth, to tackle the relationship between Arab political and economic activity on the one hand, and attitudes toward the United States expressed through public opinion polling on the other. <http://www.washingtoninstitute.org/templateC04.php?CID=331>

YALE GLOBAL

POWER GAME IN ASIA TRIPS NUCLEAR NON-PROLIFERATION; ATTEMPTS TO GAIN INFLUENCE BY SPREADING TECHNOLOGY THREATEN THE NON-PROLIFERATION REGIME. Harsh V. Pant. YaleGlobal, 12 August 2010

It's safe to conclude that notwithstanding the hype surrounding the NPT Review Conference held in May, the nuclear non-proliferation regime as we have known it is on its last legs. And the reason is simple: the changing balance of power. The most dramatic changes in the global balance of power are taking place in Asia, and it's there that the epitaph of the non-proliferation regime is being written. International regimes merely reflect the extant distribution of power, and the non-proliferation regime is out of sync with the distribution of global power at the moment. Is it any surprise then that its credibility is rapidly eroding?

GAZA: THE SILVER LINING? YaleGlobal. Gustav Ranis. August 5, 2010.

The Israeli-Palestinian divide is so deep and the world has so many pressing economic and security challenges, it's no surprise that many foreign-policy experts put the Middle East low on any U.S. priority list. But the longstanding plight of millions of Palestinians in the occupied zones reverberates and captures attention far beyond the region, explains the author. Organizing aid flotillas, activists test Israel's will to enforce its blockade and document any brutality. Israel's hard-line stance divides its allies and unites Muslim nations in opposition. <http://bit.ly/ah2c5a> [HTML format, various paging].

MAOIST INSURGENCY TRIPS UP RISING INDIA. YaleGlobal. Eric Randolph. July 29, 2010.

Enjoying rapid growth, India looks to make use of rich mineral holdings in its eastern states. But the rural poor and tribal people living near these deposits have been deprived of their rights and often oppressed by corrupt officials in cahoots with developers, explains the author. The government expects development to boost foreign investment and ensure energy security, but as Randolph writes, the "tribals view globalization largely as a source of intrusion, dispossession and pollution." Though the insurgents don't intentionally seek a global audience, escalating conflict unnerves wealthy investors abroad and rouses sympathy from human-rights groups.

BEIJING: A GLOBAL LEADER WITH 'CHINA FIRST' POLICY. YaleGlobal. David Shambaugh. June 29, 2010.

Observers have long hoped for new openness and cooperation from a confident China. They scan every international event, from the majestic Beijing Olympics of summer 2008 to the recent G-20 summit in Toronto, for indications of China's policy direction. If any clear trend is visible, it is that the world's second largest economy largely continues with a narrow, fluctuating foreign-policy approach. "On global issues, Beijing appears to act with an odd combination of hesitancy and truculence," explains David Shambaugh. <http://bit.ly/creMpy>

THE MIDDLE EAST AT THE CROSSROADS – PART II. YaleGlobal. Dilip Hiro. June 10. 2010.

Democracy in a rising powers like Turkey, along with economic and military distractions for the West, prompts governments to strengthen ties with regional neighbors. The political transformation behind Turkey's independent foreign policy, explains author Dilip Hiro, began with the 2002 election of the reformist Adalet ve Kalkinma Partisi or AKP, with Islamist roots. Success on the domestic front in terms of a growing economy, low public debt and a hard line on corruption boosted confidence for foreign affairs. As Europe dawdles on EU membership for Turkey, Turkey steps forward on the world stage, taking bold moves in relations with the likes of Israel, Syria, Iran and the U.S. <http://bit.ly/c6EJqQ>
